Bottega's Italian Sparkling Life.

Sandro Bottega, President and CEO

As tenant farmers in the 1600s, the Bottega family knew the true wealth of Northern Italy was not found in the palaces and the towns. The real treasure was in the landscape, in the vines they worked by hand and the products they provided the local community. From this belief, the Bottegas formulated a dream.

For the last four centuries, the Bottega family has cultivated this singular vision. Today, the winery and distillery are one of the top 20 private wineries and distilleries in Italy. They produce wines from Valpolicella, Chianti and Montalcino as well as spirits, fine liqueurs and the internationally celebrated Bottega Gold Prosecco DOC.

"We are especially proud of our Gold Prosecco DOC," says Sandro Bottega, President and CEO of Bottega SpA. "Gold Prosecco is one of the most famous Italian sparkling wines in the world.* It is the perfect sparkling wine for anyone who appreciates great quality and our company's commitment to sustainability and the protection of the environment."

The Bottega family now works closely with one of the Southeast's most influential sommeliers, Mauro Maugliani, who serves as Director of Sales and US Brand Ambassador to educate on, sell and distribute the portfolio of still and sparkling wines, including the iconic Gold Prosecco DOC, the luxurious Amarone and Ripasso.

"Just taste it," Maugliani says. "The harmony of every landscape we work in is felt in everything we do."

"A large part of our success comes from our indissoluble commitment to true sustainability," Sandro Bottega adds. "Capturing the attention of wine connoisseurs is important to us, but so is having a positive impact on the world and each environment where we work. This is all part of our sparkling Italian life."
